Achilles' Cardiac Fall

In the heart of the light are the sorrows of the night
In the night there is the quantum dark keeping up a
Virgil-vigil for the dawn to swan out one scarlet rose
Rise to the window open your palms to let the dawn

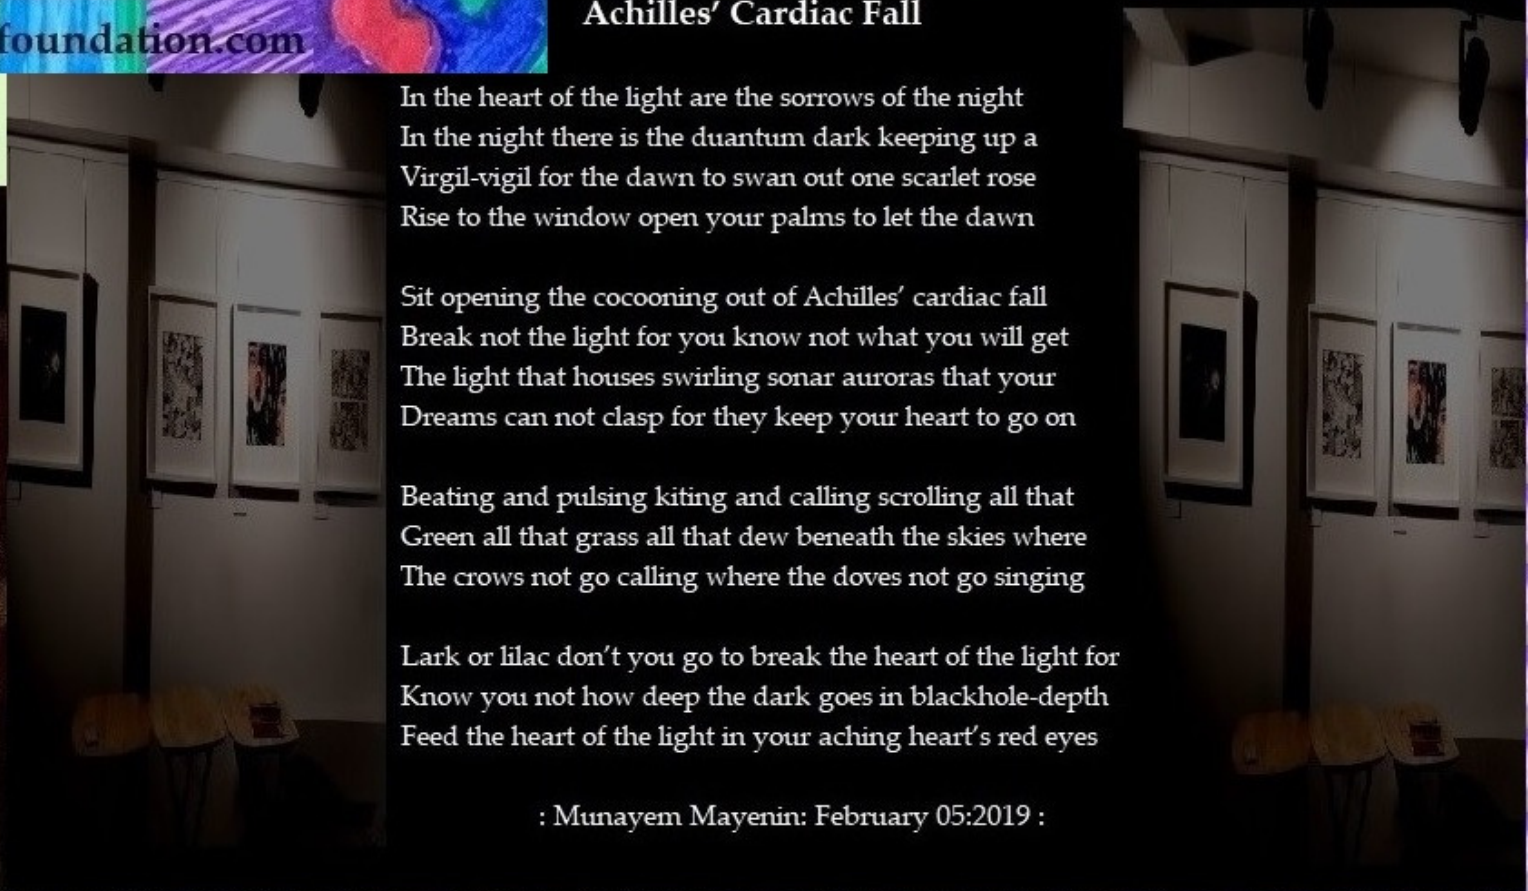

Sit opening the cocooning out of Achilles' cardiac fall
Break not the light for you know not what you will get
The light that houses swirling sonar auroras that your Dreams can not clasp for they keep your heart to go on

Beating and pulsing kiting and calling scrolling all that Green all that grass all that dew beneath the skies where
The crows not go calling where the doves not go singing

Lark or lilac don't you go to break the heart of the light for
Know you not how deep the dark goes in blackhole-depth
Feed the heart of the light in your aching heart's red eyes
